Description

A masterpiece of history and authenticity
This remarkable Tuscan "Fratino" oak table from the 1600s is one of the finest examples of Italian craftsmanship from the Baroque era. Made entirely of solid oak, it features a splendid patina that reveals centuries of history and refined beauty. In excellent general condition, it measures 140x59xh80 cm -- proportions that perfectly balance elegance and strength. Today, it is truly rare to find a piece of such authenticity and preservation. Indeed, its charm comes not only from the noble wood but also from the traces of time that make it unique. Owning it means embracing a tangible part of 17th-century Tuscan tradition.
