Description

Oriental system pistol (hidden dagger) - India or bordering regions, 19th centuryInteresting system pistol whose handle can be detached by pressing a push button and thus release a double-edged blade. Pistol covered with chiseled silver sheets. Barrel with sides. Flintlock of local manufacture. The internal spring of the lock is a replacement based on a steel rod. Due to the change of spring the mechanism works but the percussion of the hammer is weak. The stock is decorated with a beautiful elephant head in silvered bronze. The blade has a slight play.
