Description

Metal Blade Owl by Sergio Bustamante, Mexico, 1970 This work, by Mexican artist Sergio Bustamante, embodies the masterful fusion of traditional craftsmanship and modernity. Renowned for its elegance and finesse, the owl, a symbol of wisdom and mystery, comes to life under the artist's fingers through carefully assembled metal blades. Each piece, cut and welded by hand, reveals a subtle play of light and shadow, giving the animal a presence that is both robust and delicate. Sergio Bustamante, a major figure in contemporary Mexican art, draws his inspiration from nature and pre-Hispanic cultures. His sculptures, often made of metal, wood, or bronze, are distinguished by their movement, expressiveness, and ability to capture the very essence of their subjects. The owl, here, becomes much more than a decorative object: it stands out as a silent guardian, carrying universal symbols. Exhibited in galleries around the world, his work captivates with its originality and craftsmanship. This sculpture, both timeless and resolutely modern, invites contemplation and dreaming, while celebrating the cultural heritage and boundless creativity of Sergio Bustamante.
