Description

Giuseppe De Nittis (1846-1884) is one of the leading figures of 19th-century Italian painting, active in Paris where he befriended the Impressionist artists. Admired for his refined sense of light and his ability to capture modern elegance, he became one of the most sensitive interpreters of Parisian life during the Third Republic. Exhibiting with the Impressionist group from 1874 onwards, he contributed to the emergence of a new vision of painting, blending modern realism, atmospheric poetry, and worldly refinement. His works are now held in major museums such as the Musée d'Orsay, the Petit Palais, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. "A walk in the Bois de Boulogne" depicts an elegant Parisian woman pausing on a shaded path in the famous fashionable park.

Dressed in a gown and wearing a blue beret, she allows herself a moment of rest, her serene gaze turned towards the viewer, as if frozen in a parenthesis of calm and intimacy with nature. The vibrant forest background, the light filtering through the foliage, and the delicate rendering of the fabrics all testify to De Nittis's mastery of capturing the moment and feminine elegance, central themes in his Parisian work.
