Description

Description Estimo Llunes: Piràmides exemplifies Gerard Sala Rosselló's lyrical abstraction, where colour, gesture, and symbol converge into a meditative visual language. The composition features a stylized human figure extending toward a crescent moon poised above a geometric pyramid, framed within a landscape of shifting chromatic planes. Vibrant greens, deep blues, and warm ochres pulse with energy, while zigzag motifs and translucent layers evoke rhythmic movement and cosmic connection. Sala's expressive brushwork and balance between figuration and abstraction reflect his lifelong fascination with light, nature, and spiritual transformation. This work belongs to his mature period, when he synthesized poetic symbolism with the expressive intensity of the Catalan avant-garde, forming part of the "Generation of '66," which sought to reaffirm the power of painting amid conceptual tendencies. The painting embodies both emotional immediacy and intellectual refinement, offering a timeless reflection on human and cosmic harmony. Artist Gerard Sala Rosselló (1942-2024) was a Catalan painter, poet, and key exponent of lyrical abstraction and symbolic figuration. Artist Details Educated at the Escola Massana and the Escola Superior de Belles Arts de Sant Jordi in Barcelona, Sala was a prominent member of the Generation of '66, a group committed to preserving the vitality of painting during the rise of conceptual art. His oeuvre spans oil, acrylic, and mixed media, often exploring the intersection between poetic emotion and cosmic symbolism. Deeply inspired by nature, music, and Eastern philosophy, he developed a distinctive, meditative abstraction rooted in the Catalan landscape.
