Description

This sublime gilt bronze sculpture, enhanced by a brilliant golden patina, embodies the timeless elegance and artistic mastery of Henri Fugère, a renowned French sculptor. The work depicts a woman, captured in a graceful and natural movement, as if drinking from an invisible fountain, symbolizing purity and vitality. The sculpture is skillfully mounted on a base of aragonite, a semi-precious stone with pinkish hues and soft nuances, which contrasts beautifully with the golden brilliance of the bronze. Every anatomical detail is rendered with remarkable precision: the taut muscles, the hands delicately resting on the rock, and the serene expression of the face testify to Fugère's exceptional talent for capturing emotion and realism. The work, signed by the artist, is a true masterpiece of Art

Nouveau, an artistic movement that celebrates organic curves and the harmony between humankind and nature. It combines the raw strength of stone with the softness of bronze, creating a perfect balance between robustness and delicacy. Perfect for art lovers and collectors, this unique piece will bring a touch of refinement and sophistication to any interior. It is ideal for adorning a living room, office, or gallery, where it will become the focal point of the space. Its condition is very good, although I must point out some minor losses to the gilding, which are of little consequence, and its authenticity is guaranteed, making it a valuable investment for art and history enthusiasts. Don't miss the opportunity to acquire such a rare and iconic work, one that transcends time and space. MORE PHOTOS AND INFORMATION BY FOLLOWING THIS LINK:
