Description

Elegant magazine rack in smoked anthracite plexiglass, typical of 1970s French design. The curved structure is formed by two side panels with a large central circular opening, resting on two screwed-on semi-cylindrical feet. The design is understated and sculptural, reminiscent of the Space Age or furniture produced by Roche-Bobois/Michel Dumas during the same period. In good overall condition, with a few minor scratches visible depending on the light, but no cracks or chips. The plexiglass is stable, and the structure is rigid. No signature has been identified.
