Description

A refined gilded bronze mantel clock, finely crafted and modeled with rich scrolls, acanthus leaves, and rocaille motifs, typical of the Louis XV style. The structure is lively and asymmetrical, with a wavy base and decorative fretwork in the center that lightens the composition. The upper part is adorned with a group of leaves and shells, a recurring element in the Rococo repertoire. The back features a glass door that reveals the brass mechanism with bell. The gilding retains a beautiful, warm, and uniform patina, a sign of authenticity and good preservation. Origin: 18th century France
