Description

This 18th-century painting from the Neapolitan area depicts a well-known biblical scene: Jesus in the House of Martha and Mary, a subject often depicted in Christian art since the Renaissance.
The painting features three main figures: on the right, Jesus Christ, depicted as a man with an aura of light around his head, seated and with a calm, authoritative gesture; in the center, Martha, with an active expression and gestures indicating a dialogue or explanation, and a concern for serving; on the lower left, Mary kneels, with a serene, contemplative gaze toward Jesus, her hands folded on her chest.
The background depicts a domestic interior, with dishes and a laid table, symbols of Martha's daily occupations. The warm tones and rich folds of the drapes are reminiscent of the Baroque style.
