Description

An elegant two-seater Chesterfield sofa, crafted on a solid wood frame and hand-tufted using the traditional deep-buttoning technique, where buttons are set into the leather to form a regular diamond pattern. The seat is sprung and filled with dense foam and natural fibers, providing the firm comfort typical of quality pieces. Upholstered in full-grain leather dyed in a rare shade of olive green, beautifully patinated by time. A border of upholstery tacks adorns the rolled armrests, and the sofa rests on turned legs of dark-stained beech. The quality of the construction and the attention to detail demonstrate true craftsmanship, far removed from industrial production. Its proportions, the distinctive color of the leather, and its slightly more square shape compared to 19th-century

English models suggest it was made around the 1970s or 1980s, likely in a Swedish or English workshop inspired by original Victorian designs. At that time, this type of sofa was highly sought after in embassies, private clubs, and refined Nordic interiors. A true Chesterfield classic, both timeless and full of character, combining English tradition and Scandinavian simplicity. Ideal for a living room, library, or office, blending elegance, comfort, and heritage. Seat height 40cm
