Description

Large Genre Scene Painting - The Wine Press Oil on canvas, original gilt frame France, second half of the 19th century This large composition depicts a lively rural scene around a traditional wine press. In the center of the courtyard, men are busy rolling or maneuvering barrels while others operate the hand press. In the foreground, a woman in a headdress and apron, seated near an overturned basket and scattered fruit, appears to be taking a break. The scene, bathed in soft light, is harmoniously arranged around rustic architecture, open doorways, solid wood structures, and an abundance of details related to the world of winemaking. The whole is distinguished by its narrative precision and richness of expression, in a realistic style typical of 19th-century genre scenes.
