Description

Vladimir Kagan for Chromcraft -- "Star Trek" Sculpta Dining Set, 1966
Mid-Century Modern / Space Age Design
An exceptionally rare mid-century modern dining set designed by Vladimir Kagan for Chromcraft in 1966. This iconic Sculpta "Star Trek" set includes four self-returning swivel chairs and a matching oval glass dining table -- a striking example of the Space Age aesthetic that defined the late 1960s. The Sculpta Chair, also known as the "Star Trek Chair," achieved cult status after appearing in the original Star Trek television series, in the episode "The Trouble with Tribbles." Its bold, sculptural form and futuristic silhouette capture the optimism and innovation of the era, blending comfort, function, and avant-garde design. The chairs feature a rich taupe upholstery with garnet
