Description

This signed portrait exquisitely illustrates the style of the Second Empire, during the reign of Napoleon III. The lady, dressed in a dark gown adorned with a lace collar and a gilt jewel, embodies the sobriety and elegance characteristic of the bourgeoisie of that era. Her firm gaze, upright pose, and carefully controlled lighting convey a quest for balance between dignity, respectability, and refinement. A work representative of the Napoleonic taste for intimate portraiture, it reflects the confidence and prestige of a burgeoning society.
