Description

Superb and elegant marine painting, oil on canvas by Galien-Laloue. Eugène Gallien Laloue, known as Eugène Galien-Laloue, was a French painter and engraver born in Montmartre on December 11, 1854[1] and died in Chérence on April 18, 1941. One of his pseudonyms was Léon Dupuy. Known for his Parisian paintings, he also painted landscapes of Normandy, Seine-et-Marne, Marseille, Italy, and Venice. This artist's pictorial output, under his own name or a pseudonym, was prolific, and his commercial success attracted imitators whose pastiches are common on the art market. The quality of this painting, depicting a lively scene of port life, is exceptional. Ships are visible on the shore against an architectural backdrop, and the colors are vibrant and luminous.
