Description

Magnificent glazed earthenware rooster, majestically perched against a vase adorned with ears of wheat. A striking decorative piece, crafted from polychrome ceramic with a glossy glaze. Unsigned, but in the style of Paul Comoléra's work for Choisy-le-Roi or the Vallauris faience attributed to Massier, this piece is distinguished by its fine modeling and rich color palette. The rooster, particularly expressive and proud, boasts superbly detailed plumage with vibrant and deep hues, retaining all its original luster. The carefully sculpted vase, shaped like a sheaf of wheat, harmoniously completes the ensemble with its naturalistic and pastoral theme. A characterful, elegant, and decorative piece, ideal for a charming kitchen, a country house interior, or a collection of animal-themed earthenware. Period:
