Description

Corinthian lamp in plexiglass. Neo-modernist lamp from the 1970s. The precision of the detail offers an impressively realistic sculpted chiseled finish, based on: - Gold pigments - Romanesque scrollwork - Stylized palmette finials, enhanced by an inverted, concave base that allows all the light to pass through. The base thus becomes disproportionate in both thickness and width. The craftsmanship lies in the threaded, column-mounted plexiglass and a candle-inspired push-button control. Easy to position and decorative. Screw-in bulb, sold with the lampshade. Rare piece. Delivery possible, not included in the price.
