Description

This magnificent small Louis XIV commode, dating from the 18th century, captivates with its elegance and refinement. Crafted from rosewood, a precious wood with deep hues, it features finely worked geometric marquetry on its curved front, a testament to remarkable cabinetmaking skill.

This rare piece is crowned with a superb, undulating red breccia marble top, framed by a corbel molding that underscores the piece's nobility. The bombé front of the commode features three tall, generously sized drawers, adorned with chased bronze handles depicting large acanthus leaves. In the center of each drawer, a richly crafted gilt bronze keyhole escutcheon draws the eye. It is functional and comes with its original key. The rounded uprights soften the lines, while the gracefully undulating
