Description

This rare 1953 study by A. Puga captures an evocative still life of an aviator's gear--flight jacket, gloves, scarf, and goggles--arranged with quiet dignity. Executed in oil, the composition displays restrained tones of umber, ochre, and cream, highlighting the soft textures of leather and fabric against a muted background. Puga's sensitive handling of light and brushwork gives the objects a sculptural solidity and a contemplative stillness, evoking post-war reflection and memory. The artist's controlled realism and careful tonal harmony suggest both technical mastery and emotional depth. This is a fine example of mid-century Spanish realism, offering historical resonance and timeless visual balance for discerning spaces. Artist A. Puga (active mid-20th century) is
