Description

This delightful painting, in a patinated giltwood frame with 18th-century Louis XV style brackets, depicts a striking scene of a lively peasant dance, observed by a seated woman. An expressive painting full of romanticism, set against a natural backdrop of trees so dear to Camille Corot. Near a lake, at the end of the day, bathed in a diaphanous light, are the distant hills bordering the shore, the silhouette of a small hamlet against the light, and this amusing, joyful scene of a frenzied dance in the natural setting so beloved by the great painter. The technique of the Barbizon painters, particularly in the brushstrokes depicting the foliage, brings us closer to the Master; the palette of colors and the sensitivity to detail--everything in this work connects us to this "pre-Impressionist" period, where the brain
