

Set Of Five Late 18th-early 19th C Continental Glass Cordial / Dram Glasses

185 EUR

Period : 18th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Glass

Description

A charming set of five hand-blown continental European cordial or dram glasses dating from the late 18th to early 19th century.

Each glass is individually blown with subtly varying proportions, featuring bucket-shaped bowls, elegant conical stems, and wide feet bearing characteristic concentric turning marks.

The bases display natural period crizzling, a well-known phenomenon in soda-lime glass of this age caused by early glassmaking chemistry.

The effect is typical and authentic for late 18th-century northern European production.

Height of each glass: 11.3 cm.

Good condition for the age. No structural problems; the crizzling is inherent to the glass and not later damage.
