Description

DescriptionThis oil on canvas, signed and dated 1941?, presents a radiant colourist depiction of a hillside chapel surrounded by tall pine trees. The artist employs a vibrant Mediterranean palette of emerald greens, cobalt blues, and warm ochres, transforming the natural scene into a study of light and harmony. The brushwork is fluid yet deliberate, with dappled patches of colour suggesting both foliage and movement. The luminous pathway leading toward the small chapel tower serves as the focal point, framed by the rhythmic verticals of the pines. This interplay of structured composition and expressive tonality aligns with Post-Impressionist and early 20th-century colourist tendencies, where emotional resonance and chromatic balance take precedence over strict realism.
