Description

A superb antique hand-carved wooden owl sculpture, likely made in the Black Forest (Schwarzwald) region of Germany in the early 20th century (circa 1900-1930). The owl is finely crafted with a rich decoration of deeply incised feathers, typical of southern German folk art. The eyes, beak, and plumage details have a warm patina that enhances the natural tones of the wood. It rests on a solid carved base, adorned with a textured pattern characteristic of the craftsmanship of the period. The whole piece displays a beautiful patina of age, with signs of wear that attest to its age and authenticity. A decorative piece full of character, representative of the folklore and traditional craftsmanship of the Black Forest region.
