Description

A superb 19th-century oil on canvas, in the Napoleon III style, depicting a man seated in his studio, wearing a long red garment draped over his shoulders. The scene, imbued with a strong artistic atmosphere, shows the artist at rest, seated before a still-erected easel, bathed in soft light from a large arched window. The work is distinguished by its realism, the quality of its shadows, and the intimate atmosphere typical of 19th-century artists' studios. The signature, located in the lower left corner, is visible but difficult to decipher. An elegant and highly decorative painting, ideal for lovers of 19th-century art and studio scenes.
