Description

The paintings of Véronique Vermeil (1938-2017) are distinguished by their vibrant, shimmering colors. Her canvases poetically recount the journey of a nomadic artist. From her beginnings in Montmartre (Paris), she exhibited in major Parisian galleries in the Latin Quarter before settling in Tuscany (Italy). Her work evolved over time, moving from abstract to semi-figurative, with color remaining a constant. Véronique Vermeil was a colorist; for many years, she made her own paints.
