Description

Print by Paul César Helleu, published by Edmond Sagot. Depicting a woman drawing. Paul-César Helleu (1859-1927) was one of the great French masters of etching during the Belle Époque.

Known for his portraits of elegant women, he worked with a lively, refined, almost calligraphic style. The print depicting a woman drawing perfectly illustrates his art: an intimate scene, captured with grace and simplicity, where light and gesture take precedence over detail.

Published by Sagot, a renowned print dealer and printer, this work belongs to a period when Helleu and Sagot collaborated closely to promote his engravings to collectors. This partnership played a decisive role in the artist's recognition.
