Description

This finely knotted wool rug presents a classic Ersari-Beshir design from the Turkmen weaving tradition, characterised by its elongated octagonal guls arranged in disciplined vertical rows. The deep madder-red ground is complemented by indigo, walnut brown, ivory, and rose tones, producing a palette typical of 19th-century Central Asian nomadic work. The motifs show the hallmarks of Beshir workshops: angular leaf forms, stepped floral devices, and repeated secondary guls outlined in midnight blue. The borders feature a chain of sunburst medallions and geometric guard stripes, giving the piece a balanced architectural frame. The tight asymmetric knotting and soft, aged handle indicate an earlier weave, while visible wear reflects long traditional use. This example sits firmly within the classical Turkmen aesthetic, appealing to those drawn to historical textile craftsmanship, rich patination, and tribal geometry. Artist Hand-knotted by an unidentified Ersari-Beshir tribal weaver. Artist Details The weaving corresponds to the Ersari subgroup of Turkmen tribes active along the Amu Darya region (modern Turkmenistan-Uzbekistan) during the late 19th century. Workshops in this area produced some of the most recognisable Beshir rugs, identifiable by their finely drawn guls, saturated natural dyes, and distinctive border panels.
