Description

Large and powerful Cubist painting, likely dating from the 1930s-1940s, depicting a landscape with a yellow bridge, its lines and volumes interlocking in remarkable balance. The painting is signed in the lower right corner, but the artist's name is difficult to decipher (see detail in photos 6 & 7). Note: technically, the painting reflects a skillful construction, suggesting the work of an artist already possessing considerable expertise. Objectively, it is a great work of art, and the kind of painting that would merit further research to attempt identification (a heads-up for those interested in research). Size (oil on flexible cardboard): 53 cm x 39 cm - ask me for more photos if needed.
