Description

This charming, small-format seascape depicts a lively harbor scene, rendered with the delicacy and luminosity characteristic of late 19th-century Impressionist painting. The composition centers around a moored steamship, its dark silhouette standing out against a hill surmounted by a statue, in a slightly misty atmosphere. The artist subtly plays with reflections on the water, where small boats and buoys can be discerned, lending depth and movement to the composition. The artist demonstrates great mastery in capturing the maritime atmosphere, with a sky of yellow and cream hues subtly reflected in the calm waters of the harbor. The brushwork is lively and spontaneous, typical of plein air painting, capturing the moment and the unique light of a late afternoon at the port. In the lower right
