Description

DescriptionThis finely carved sculpture by C. Cipriani presents a seated female figure poised on top a stylised mythical creature, executed in alabaster, possibly marble, with delicate modelling and refined classical details. The pale stone surface emphasises the soft transitions across the drapery, anatomical contours, and serene facial expression. Her extended arms and gentle twist of the torso create a dynamic yet balanced composition, while the stepped architectural base introduces a structured contrast to the fluid modelling above. The work reflects the early 20th-century Italian academic tradition, blending neoclassical elegance with romanticised genre elements. Its harmonious proportions and polished craftsmanship give the piece a distinguished presence well suited to
