Description

Oil on canvas, dated (75) and signed by François Reynaud (Marseille 1825, Paris 1909), depicting a Neapolitan market with characters. The French painter often worked in Italy, reproducing rural scenes with picturesque characters from peasant culture. Specifically, the scene depicts a local market where ladies in elegant dresses, accompanied by their servants, go to buy fruit and vegetables. In contrast, there are characters and children in worn and dirty clothes begging for food or eating scraps and leftovers from the ground. In the center, a woman cooks food in braziers and pots to sell to passersby. The background, barely visible, is the market square in Naples with the bell tower of the Church of the Carmine on the right. Painting in good condition, the frame requires restoration. The
