Description

Small 16th-century Florentine bronze sculpture depicting a satyr. The Greek and Roman mythological figures of Satyrs or Fauns are known for having both human and animal characteristics and symbolize nature, fertility, and joy. They are often associated with the god Bacchus, god of wine and fun. The pose in which he is depicted is dynamic, almost dancing, while holding an object resembling a staff.

Measurements: height with base 14 cm, width 3 cm, depth 5 cm, height without base 11 cm
