Description

This Pondicherry spice cabinet, crafted from teak and dating back to 1900, is a true gem of colonial furniture. It opens with two doors, featuring rosewood panels and locks, offering both security and elegance. The two drawers, adorned with brass handles, add a touch of refinement and practicality to this unique piece. Inside, two shelves provide ample storage space for spices and other culinary treasures. Teak, renowned for its durability and natural beauty, lends this cabinet a robust and timeless aesthetic. This cabinet perfectly embodies the charm and authenticity of period furniture, while bringing a touch of exoticism and sophistication to any interior. A true testament to Pondicherry's artisanal expertise at the beginning of the 20th century.Period: 1900 Excellent
