Description

This substantial four-panel mahogany screen, dating from the early 20th century, is a remarkable piece of furniture, distinguished by its elegance and functionality. The screen features two distinct sides, offering a dual aesthetic and great versatility. One side is upholstered in quilted red faux leather, adding a touch of luxury and sophistication. This quilted covering creates a rich, textured visual effect, ideal for adding character to a classic or contemporary interior. The other side is covered in a cream fabric adorned with fleur-de-lis, a symbol of purity and nobility. This delicate and refined motif contrasts harmoniously with the quilted red, allowing you to change the ambiance of a room with a simple gesture. Mahogany, a noble and durable wood, gives this screen exceptional robustness and
