Description

Rare example of a Caucasian carpet called Saliani, originating from the Southeast Caucasus. From the first part of the 20th century.

1900-1920. This beautiful rug is in very good condition for its age and measures 132 cm wide by 205 cm long. The colors used are quite distinctive: wolf pelt, violet, and blue. The design is found only on Saliani rugs, typical of those from the village of Lenkoran, and likely depicts a millipede. The overall design consists of a stylized floral motif surrounding a highly structured rug. The attractive border features large, stylized flowers in a dusty rose color against a luminous blue background. The wool is soft and lustrous, creating a harmonious whole. This rug has been professionally and ecologically cleaned. Dimensions: Width: 132 cm (52") x
