Description

This elegant walnut dressing table, dating from the 1940s, perfectly embodies the refined, geometric aesthetic of the Art Deco style. Its large, beveled hexagonal mirror immediately draws the eye with its angular facets that subtly reflect the light, while also highlighting the architectural character of the piece. The hexagonal top follows the same logic of geometric rigor, typical of the period. In the center, a single drawer opens with a finely crafted pull handle, adorned with stylized flowers in the pure Art Deco decorative spirit. On the sides of the table, two large triangles add a bold, graphic touch, reinforcing the dressing table's sculptural silhouette. These sides are connected by a faceted stretcher that adds both stability and elegance. This rare piece captivates with its balance of
