brushstrokes. The red and white vertical bands, decorated with sinuous patterns, frame the sides and add a dynamic, scenic effect. The upper cornice and the base feature a faux-marble finish in rosy and earthy tones, highlighting the craftsmanship of the piece. The original wrought-iron hardware further enriches the ensemble, preserving the authentic character of the wardrobe. Its compact yet slender proportions, combined with the chromatic intensity and richness of decoration, make this wardrobe ideal both for traditional interiors and for contemporary spaces seeking a strong focal element. The stylistic and pictorial elements fully reflect the Alpine decorative tradition of the mid-19th century, a period in which folk painting achieved remarkable expressive vitality.
