

Discobolus In Marble

1 600 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Marble

Height : 33,5 cm

Description

Discobolus in Marble Italy, late 19th century - early 20th century 33.5 cm high The Diskobolos, or Discus Thrower, is a celebrated masterpiece of classical Greek sculpture created by Myron around 460-450 BC. It depicts an athlete captured at the precise moment, in tense balance, before throwing the discus, revealing Myron's remarkable ability to express both movement and harmony in the human form. Although the original bronze, which may once have stood at Delphi or Olympia, has never been found, its legacy lives on through several Roman marble copies. Among these, the famous Esquiline copy in Rome offers one of the clearest impressions of the lost masterpiece. The Discobolus has continued to inspire the artistic imagination for centuries. Her balanced energy and idealized

Dealer

Ladron de Guevara

Généraliste

Tel : +49 351 2000010

Mobile : +49 1727905946

Calle Ribera de Curtidores 29,

Madrid 28005

athletic beauty inspired artists of later eras, particularly those of the Baroque and Romantic movements, thus ensuring her a lasting place as a symbol of classical art.