Description

This pleasant large-format canvas depicts a young lady as an allegory of summer. The scene is set beneath a portico or loggia, as evidenced by the niche on the right containing a large Medici vase. At the center of the composition is the young woman, richly dressed in a grapefruit-colored gown with white sleeves and a light-blue skirt, cinched by a belt adorned with a pearl. Around her neck she wears a small ruff, while a page places a straw hat upon her head. The young lady holds a bundle of wheat in one arm, while with her right hand she presents a plate of seasonal fruit: peaches and cherries. On the left side of the painting, a bouquet of flowers emerges from a precious polychrome porcelain vase. The canvas, in excellent condition, is a complex pictorial exercise combining both portraiture and still
