Description

An 18th-century Aubusson tapestry in wool. This tapestry depicts a park with a central pond, orange tree pots, a forest in the background, and a court figure in the lower right corner. It's a subject one doesn't often see. The partially original borders frame this scene beautifully. The tapestry was once lined. It's a fragment of a tapestry that must have been much larger on the left. The condition is fair, with some fabric missing at the top, and the weft is slightly unstitched in places. I've uploaded some photos and can provide further details.
