Description

Cast Iron Sculpture - Angel with Butterfly & Cornucopia - Early 20th Century

An elegant cast iron sculpture depicting a charming angelic child captured in a moment of grace: a delicate butterfly has landed on his arm, drawing his tender and contemplative gaze. A poetic and refined piece, typical of the decorative creations of the early 20th century, originally designed to adorn a park or a distinguished garden.

Description & Iconography

The precise and refined modelling offers a soft, harmonious reading of the scene:

Graceful angel, standing, with a finely sculpted face

Wavy, detailed hair, beautifully executed

Draped cloth tied around the hips, adding movement and elegance

Butterfly resting on the arm, symbolising delicacy, innocence and transformation

Cornucopia at his feet, overflowing with sculpted fruits, evoking prosperity and abundance

Rocky base, visually balanced and perfectly stable

A decorative piece of great character -- expressive, poetic, and truly timeless.

Price: EUR3,480

Material & Origin

Cast iron

Period: Early 20th Century

Origin: Former private park

The patina has been preserved in its original state, full of authentic charm

You may of course keep this beautiful aged patina, but several enhancement options are possible depending on your decorative vision:

? Repainting it, while maintaining its original spirit

? Gilding certain elements with gold leaf -- especially the fruits of the cornucopia, as well as selected areas of the drapery or the hair -- recalling the splendour and refinement of the ornamental sculptures found in the gardens of the Château de Versailles.

Such subtle gilding would elevate the piece's majestic allure and give it a truly spectacular presence.
