Description

Rare bronze proof with brown patina, depicting a "lying sheep", Rosa Bonheur (1822-1899). Rosa Bonheur is recognized for her ability to represent animals from an anatomical and psychological point of view. The way she looks at the world around her demonstrates a completely exceptional vision of flora and fauna, both domestic and wild. Rosa Bonheur is characterized by "A powerful and innovative work". With her own animal studies, she is interested in the psychology of living beings that she does not seek to hierarchize. In this, she is a precursor of animal studies. Her sculptures and her paintings will enjoy great success for their very realistic character. Sculpture signed "ROSA.B" in hollow, on the naturalist oval terrace. Old edition sculpture, period second half of the 19th century
