Description

A rare and beautiful ornamental porcelain clock from Paris, depicting "The Chinese Hunter" and his dog flushing out wild geese. Set on its removable, fitted base decorated with friezes and birds on cherry branches (a small, insignificant chip at one corner), a fire-breathing dragon, and coral acanthus scrolls; this remarkable piece, attributed to Jacob-Petit, is set within a nature scene of tender green reeds and very elegant violet-toned foliage; a Chinese hunter in his fine attire and hat, brandishing a spear, observes a wild goose and its offspring in a hollow of water leaves on rocks by a riverbank. His faithful dog will flush them out, and attentive to the reaction of this fine game, he waits, arm raised on the spear, his left arm concealed on the promontory, ready for action...
