Siss (20th Century): William Siss was a painter active during the second half of the 20th century, known for his social scenes and depictions of iconic locations such as Deauville and other major European social centers. A discreet and little-documented artist, he nevertheless carved out a niche for himself in the art market thanks to his vibrant compositions that blend famous figures, artists, writers, and personalities from the cultural and industrial worlds. His work, regularly presented at auction, is characterized by an almost narrative approach: each painting captures a moment, an atmosphere, a social circle, offering a truly "reportage-like" vision of his era.
