Description

Oil on panel "Sacred Image of the Child with a Garland of Flowers" - Early 19th century An elegant devotional painting executed in oil on panel, likely from the European school between the 18th and 19th centuries. The work depicts the Child Jesus, seated outdoors, wrapped in a rich red tunic with soft draperies. His sweet, slightly inclined face is crowned by a luminous halo, a typical iconographic element of sacred painting. In his right hand, he holds an elegant garland of brightly colored flowers, rendered with meticulous attention to detail, while his other hand makes an open and benevolent gesture. The simple landscape background and the intense color scheme lend the scene a serene and contemplative atmosphere. The panel features a vertical crack and slight signs of aging, testifying
