Description

Beautiful oil on hardboard panel by Jean-Gabriel Domergue (1889-1962), signed lower left and titled on the reverse: "Marlene". Exhibition label: "L'Exposition de l'Art français", Aix-les-Bains. Jean-Gabriel Domergue's favorite subject was women. He defined himself as "the inventor of the pin-up," establishing the Parisian woman as an emblem and changing the perception of women. In 1920, he proposed a new aesthetic by representing Parisian elegance, the refinement of taste and fashion of the time. The women are slender with long necks, depicted in bust-length portraits, with vibrant colors to convey a certain graceful nonchalance. Domergue's women have a close connection to the bourgeoisie and the tastes of this elite. In very good condition. Mr. Noé Willer has confirmed the authenticity of this work
