Description

Important bombé commode in carved fir wood, richly shaped, lacquered and gilded, most likely from the Venetian area and dating to the 18th century. The piece features a three-drawer serpentine front and similarly shaped sides, with an elegant, flowing silhouette. The decoration is one of its most striking aspects: from the upper part descend large carved and gilded pendants, while the lower section is adorned with an intricate frieze of stylised vegetal motifs. The overall effect is highly scenic, characteristic of the more theatrical Venetian production of the 18th century. The lacquer, in light tones with green-grey nuances, shows old touch-ups and restorations; the gilding remains largely original, with only minor interventions. Some ancient alterations affect the structure, including the
