Description

Rare and important wall panels by Pierre Sabatier, dating from the 1970s, originating from a large bourgeois house in the Nantes region... Made of copper and tin, oxidized and worked, they reveal a raw and organic beauty magnified by time: their natural patina and oxidized hues give them a unique personality and a strong character. Sabatier's talent shines through in every detail of these wall sculptures, where the metal seems to come alive under his hands. Preserved in remarkable condition and accompanied by documented provenance, these panels represent much more than a simple decorative acquisition: they are a piece of 20th-century design history that will naturally find its place in any discerning collection. Dimensions: 1 panel: height 150cm x width 57cm; 1 panel: height 150cm x width
