Description

English cut crystal and repoussé silver powder compact, early 20th century. An elegant testament to the Edwardian lifestyle, this English powder compact dating from the early 20th century captivates with the harmony of its materials and the finesse of its execution. The body, made of cut crystal with vertical facets, captures the light with precious delicacy, evoking the beauty kits of high-society ladies. Its solid silver lid (925 standard), finely repoussé with floral and foliate motifs, reveals a highly virtuosic goldsmithing technique, typical of British workshops of the period. Inside rests an original powder puff of luxurious, soft, and airy swan down, adorned in its center with a matching silver button, highlighting the attention to the smallest details. Preserved in perfect condition, this rare
