Description

This magnificent 18th-century Lucerna chandelier with six lights, crafted in Rome in the early 1700s, is a remarkable example of Baroque elegance and refined craftsmanship. A unique piece preserved in excellent overall condition and still in its original patina, it is perfect for collectors and for anyone looking to enhance their interiors with an authentic and highly decorative historical element.

The chandelier features six lights: three candle-style lights on the outer arms and an additional light on the lower finial, a characteristic detail of Roman models of the period. Made of copper sheet with silver plating, it is entirely hand-repoussé, adorned with rich Baroque decorations that highlight the skill of 18th-century artisans. Its surface, full of historical
