Description

A substantial 19th-century solid wood architectural fireplace, boasting a restrained yet majestic silhouette inspired by neoclassical design. The mantel is distinguished by a trapezoidal pediment with finely crafted geometric panels, forming an elegant cross and lozenge pattern, a testament to meticulous and perfectly balanced joinery. The molded crossbar rests on two robust cylindrical uprights, reminiscent of columns, lending the piece a strong architectural presence. The deliberately clean lines highlight the quality of the wood, its warm patina, and the harmonious proportions. This model lends itself equally well to a classic interior or a contemporary setting, whether in contrast or harmony. Features: Period: 19th century Material: solid wood Style: neoclassical /
